THE HAYTIEN REVOLUTION .- A letter from a Boston gentleman, who left here in the brig Thoosa for Aux Cayes, dated at the latter place 29th ult. says: "Tarrived here March 3, and was much surprised, on landing, to and the place ACTIES.—There has been no change since our last the parties of the insurgents from entering. The latter were posted about fifteen miles distant, in three divisions, holding the place in complete siege. The black General, in command here, was determined to defend his post to the last. It is related of him that, twenty-eight years ago he was one of Christophe's commanders, and of most blood-thirsty character. When Christophe gave notice of his determination to destroy all the mulattoes on the island, this General who had a mulatto wife and three children, went home, shot his wife, and dashed all his children's brains out. He then went to the King and informed him of what he had done, and Christophe, enraged at the recital of such a horrid crime, struck out one of the mur-what the people felt at having such a commander. The troops were deserting, so that in a week he had not more than 400 out of 2,000 left, when one divison of the besieging army marched into town, and were joined by all the Government troops. Two days afterwards, the remainder of the army came in, making about 8000 in all, but they were very orderly and quiet. In the mean time, Col. Touro, who commanded the arsenal, had threatened to blow it up before he would surrender. This alarmed the inhabitants, and about two-thirds of them deserted the place. He kep, the town in this state for two days, and about seven o'clock on the second day, seated himsel, tremendous. The arsenal was nearly in the centre of the town, and nearly all the doors and windows, within 600 yards were thrown open, and some stones, weighing 200 pounds were thrown 500 feet. The arsenal and fifteen other buildings were burnt, but the wind luckily blowing towards the water, the flames were stopped. The insurgent General, Reviere, was formerly Lieut. Colonel of a regiment quartered in this town, under command of Colonel Touro, and it is said that the latter could not brook the idea of giving himself up to his junior officer, and hence his resolution of blowing himself up with the arsenal. The Patriot Army left us about a week since, without opposition, and thence will march to the Cape, and to St. Domingo city. They will probably find no opposition, as nineteen-twentieths of the people are in favor of a change of Government. All the men have gone with the Army, and probably nothing will be done for two months, or until Boston Courier. their return."
